WASHINGTON, Oct. 11 (A) -Sputnik may have company very

A State Department spokesman said today the department wouldn't be surprised if the Russians launched another earth sattellite at any time.

Press officer Jameson Parker declined to elaborate on his statement elicited at a news conference, other than to say he was not speaking hypothetically. This suggests his statement might be based on secret intelligence.

There has been speculation that the Russians would choose Nov. 7, the 40th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution, to put a second satellite in orbit. Parker's comment was taken to mean the firing could come sooner.

Sputnik's Speed Is Hard To Grasp

Sputnik's speed is hard for the imagination to grasp. The sun appears to go once around the earth in 24 hours, a speed of more than 1,000 miles an hour. A generation ago most persons would have predicted that man would never equal that speed, but a few jet planes have narrowly surpassed it for relatively short distances.

Sputnik circles the earth in 96 minutes at 18,000 miles an hour, and continues going indefinitely without motive power and without appreciably slowing down.

This is a scientific achievement of immense magnitude. The history of science contains many examples of men in different countries, each working without the other's knowledge, who made identical discoveries almost at the same moment. The International Geophysical Year Project, which included plans for earth satellites, is a vast design for international cooperation to gain information to be fully shared by scientists Russian cooperation with respect to Sputnik, however, has been less than wholehearted. Radio Moscow is announcing its timetable so that spotters can watch for it, but information revealed about it in Moscow, even now, is vague compared to the data the United States has realized about its own as yet unrealized satellite project.

The Russians changed the wavelength agreed upon for its beeps, thus rendering much existing tracking equipment useless until it is changed. They sent Sputnik on an orbit that misses most of the tracking stations already set up throughout the world. They did not announce the launching date in advance, and fooled everybody by letting it appear that they weren't even close to being ready.

This may be peaceful coexistence, as defined in Moscow. It is not the kind of scientific cooperation the non-communist world is contributing to the International Geophysical Year.

The Fund for the Republic, which may no longer be attributed to the Ford Foundation, is engaging in "questions facing Americans today." Such a study is worth while no matter by whom it is made. The results, the conclusions, the decisions reached may be of value or not depending upon the capabilities and integrity of those making the study and the correctness of the reporting of their dis-

Among the questions which the Fund for the Republic says are facing Americans are these:

"When a union member wants to change the policy or the leadership of his union, does he have freedom of expression? What is the union's role in modern

"When different religious groups discuss public bus service for parochial school children, are they approaching a fundamental problem in the church-state relationship in a democratic system?"

These may be among the important issues of the moment, although it would seem that they might be trivial compared with the realistic danger to this Republic arising out of its conflict with the Soviet Universal State, the United States thus far having lost ground since the Berlin Airlift in 1949. It appears to me that a study by great minds of the causes of our failure to meet the Russian attack upon us and our way of life would be more Important than whether children attending paro-vented from receiving free orange juice. But maybe not. Perhaps Adolf A. Berle, Jr., Scott Buchanan, Eugene Burdick, Eric Goldman, Clark Kerr, Henry R. Luce, Father John Courtney Murray, Reinhold Niebuhr, Isidor I. Rabi and Robert Redfield, who are the consultants in these studies, will begin with the simpler problems and end with the cosmic one. They are to meet for discussion and debate in proper scholastic fashion. In fact, the brochure on the

'The Committee has three functions: to think, to discuss, and to publish. Out of its deliberations and the work commissioned by it, the Fund hopes that fresh definitions of fundamental problems and a clarification of the arguments concerning these problems will emerge. The discussions of the Committee may become models of the rational debate essential to the democratic process . .

This is indeed a novel task, for most of the thinking in this world was not done by behest but as a voluntary action by certain individuals who could not avoid thinking. I wonder who told Aristotle that he should think. Discussion undoubtedly has produced some truth. Certainly the Sanhedrin produced a volume of truth as a result of discussion but generally speaking, most of the original individuals, often as one might say, got their ideas out of their own heads. As for models for rational debate, there are many, including the debates in the Congress of the United States which have kept this country moving since we became a nation.

Robert M. Hutchins, who runs the Fund for the Republic, says of this effort:

'It would be pretentious to suppose that any pioneering venture such as the program of studies we are undertaking could offer definitive solutions to the problem of how to maintain and expand individual liberties in an industrialized and politically polarized world. But I believe that the program offers reasonable expectation that the Fund can, by concentrating upon it, make its most effective contribution to the maintenance of freedom and justice in the United States.'

This is very hopeful indeed, particularly as it is important to maintain freedom and justice in the United States. It is also important that we continue as a nation. It is also important that we should not be destroyed by war or infiltration.

But what, may I ask, is a "politically polarized world"? Perhaps the consultants will answer that. I suppose it means that the political world is divided between the two extremes, the East and the West, Communism and Capitalism, Totalitarianism and Democracy. But where is there such

GOP Leaders Decide Ike's Coattails No Longer Hold Political Appeal

WASHINGTON — Only a year after President Eisenhower's landslide victory, word has gone out to Republican Congressmen from Congressman Dick Simpson of Pennsylvania, Chairman of the GOP Congressional Campaign Committee: "Vote your district point of view and never mind White House orders.'

This means a widening rift inside the Republican party and increasing difficulty in passing any administration program.

As Congressional campaign chief. Simpson is largely responsible for electing a Republican Congress next year. He has warned GOP candidates that the ride on Ike's coattails is over, that his political popularity has dropped drastically 'Sure, this may mean a party split, but we're politicians. It is our job to get elected," he has told subordinates privately. "There aren't any politicians in the White House. We have tried it their way, and we are losing ground.

He pointed out that three Republican veterans-Congressmen John Taber of New York, John Vorys of Ohio, and Lee Arends of Illinois-are in political trouble at home for supporting the President's foreign aid program. All three will probably face primary opposition from anti-Eisenhower Republicans.

In an attempt to head off a party split, GOP National Chairman Meade Alcorn has held several secret conferences with

The Air Force may have beaten Russia into space this summer with the first man-made satellite -though it was an accident. A nose cone on a guided missile misfired and could still be whizzing around the earth.

The bullet-shaped nose cone, about 18 inches long and polished smooth as glass, was catapulted into space by the experimental X-17 which the Air Force has been using to blaze the way for the inter-continental Atlas.

The Air Force has been shooting the three-stage X-17 to the edges of outer space. There the missile normally noses downward, and the third stage fires the cone downward at terrific speed into the earth's atmosphere. Purpose of the experiment is to duplicate the conditions the Atlas's warhead will encounter when it plunges into the atmosphere.

In this particular case, however, the nose cone was blasted upward instead of downward. Air Force scientists are convinced it was traveling at sufficient speed to launch it in an orbit around the earth. Of course, it wasn't equipped with radio or instruments that would make it possible to track as in the case of the Soviet Sputnik.

Meanwhile, Uncle Sam's official satellite project "Vanguard" bogged down at Cape Canaveral, Fla. The American "moon" has to be boosted into the air with a three-stage launching device of which the second and third stages have been successfully test-fired. But the crucial first stage, which must lift the other two off the ground, has been waiting a month for its test flight reversed, but has since been cited many times by the Supreme General Electric built the cru-Court. Neither in the 1954 nor cial first-stage engines. They 1955 decisions by the Supreme were accepted for delivery after

When the rocket was loaded with dummy second and third stages, the Navy was not able to get it off the ground. The excuse is that a better fuel is needed.

X-Ray Danger

Radiologists now warn that thousands of people yearly are needlessly injured by incorrect use of X-ray equipment.

Worst offenders are dentists general practitioners who can buy X-ray machines and fluoroscopes even though they lack special training in their use. Patients can absorb dangerous radioactivity, threatening their ability to have children and possibly even shortening their own lives or causing cancer.

The problem has always existed, but it has been dramatized by public discussion of the danger from nuclear weapon "fallout." Fluoroscopes can be especially dangerous.

As a result, even trained radiologists are today re-examining their methods to reduce patients'

A rule of thumb is to avoid the use of X-rays whenever possible. Broken bones, for example, can often be discovered by touch. Dentists can avoid the reckless use of X-rays by probing for cavities, then X-raying only those teeth where definite cavities are suspected.

Experts point out that, as general rule, X-ray machines and fluoroscopes should be used only when other methods cannot be substituted. It's also important that the equipment be correcly calibrated, so the doctor knows exactly how much radiation is being administered. He should use a proper shield, so X-rays are not spread needlessly over the patient's body but confined only to the part under examination or treatment. This applies especially to dental X-rays and chest X-rays for TB detection. If done properly, the exposure to radioactivity during a chest X-ray front pages the news story was printed the other day that the Governor of Arkansas had revealcomplaints from parents claiming that Federal troops were in or near the dressing rooms of the girls at Little Rock High School. This was indignantly denied by the Secretary of the Army and by the White House. But nobody has denied that the Federal troops have actually been patrolling the corridors of the school building

Under what law of Congress and under what Federal Court order were the troops stationed inside a public school, and what have they been doing there?

This is a question which has escaped general attention, but it goes to the heart of the dispute over the illegality of the so-called "occupation" of Little Rock by Federal troops. For there is no Supreme Court ruling and no law of Congress and no court order thus far issued which gives federal troops the right to station themselves inside any public school at Little Rock. If there is disorder inside a school, it is something for the principal or the local police or the state authorities to deal with. Under the Federal Constitution only upon request of the Governor or the state legislature can Federal troops enter a state unless there is insurrection against enforcement of an act of Congress. At Little Rock neither the Federal government nor the State of Arkansas was a party to the basic lawsuit out of which came the Federal court order. Such a court order cannot be enforced by Federal troops unless Congress should by law authorize that action - which it has never done. The U.S. marshal is supposed to deputize private citizens to assist him in enforcing a court order.

Governor's Statement Apropos of the right of Federal troops to be in the public schools patrolling the corridors, the Governor of South Carolina issued a statement on this point last Friday. Due to a careless error at a relay point on the wire services or for some other reason, his statement was not distributed throughout the United States and its publication was confined solely to the south — at least this correspondent could not find it printed in any of the principal newspapers Friday or Saturday in this section of the country. Many persons in the South are resentful over what they claim is lack of coverage by the northern papers of their side of the current controversy.

Governor Timmerman's statement was certainly news. He said in part:

"I publicly call upon General Eisenhower to tell the American people what law he thinks armed terror troops were sent to Little Rock to enforce. Vague references to the law and orders of courts are no answer.

and Congress has given them no that decision?'

power to order integration. What act of Congress does General Eisenhower think authorizes these courts to order a public school to integrate, and what is the text of that law?

"The Supreme Court, in the school-segregation cases, said no person could be denied admittance to a public school solely because of race, but it did not say admittance shall be granted solely because of race.

"It did not preclude the right to deny admission to any person for good valid reason or to prevent impending violence, or to preserve peace and good will in a community. Nor did it confer upon other Federal courts the power to order integration. What decision of the Supreme Court 'Both the Federal District does General Eisenhower think Courts and the Federal Circuit orders the integration of public Courts were created by Congress, schools, and what is the text of

49 Plymouth Sedan

Dear Friend:

I stopped at Thrifty Auto Sales Saturday and saw some of the nicest cars that I have ever seen on any Used Car Lot anywhere That '51 Olds "88" Hard top and the '48 Plymouth were really sharp! If you are still thinking about buying a car, I wish you would stop at "Thrifty" and see Gene Gulick. Just tell him a friend sent you. Bob and Stoner will treat you right too. Sometimes they even slip up a little and allow you too much for your trade-in.

I'd actually be afraid to buy a used car anywhere else. I've bought every car I've ever owned from Gene. He knows how and where to buy Nice Cars. I depend on him completely. Stop at "Thrifty" and see Gene, Stoner or Bob. They'll help you find the car you really want. Their lot is down at 305 South Center Street.
